But if you're looking to watch a different kind of film, this one has time for you to develop an attachment towards your fishy friend! You might be surprised at how realistic the characters are, even with only CGI for their animation. It's a movie that takes you on quite an emotional ride, especially if you pay attention to the lyrics. The story of Koi Mil Gaya begins with Samir (Hrithik Roshan), a man who lives in Mumbai along with his little brother Rakesh (Aakash Dabhade). When Samir was very young, his father died during an attempt at rescuing another man. He was thus devastated and vowed never to fall in love again to protect himself from further pain. As the years go by, he becomes a book editor and works with Priya (Bipasha Basu) who happens to be the girlfriend of his boss, Tarun Mehra (Farida Jalal). Rakesh is very attached to his fish, Lilu (Akhilendra Singh), and has always wanted to bring her with him to Mumbai. He even gives his brother the idea of getting her. However, he finds that Lilu is not as easy to handle as he thought she would be. She wanders off outside their flat and eventually gets lost in the city. Samir tries to find Lilu, but finds out that she's been bought by a fish trader who treats her like an object of trade. Following the story does with a give the story does with a give the story does with a give the fish has received a small fortune in exchange for his earlier fish purchase. It is then that he realizes that money can't buy everything, including human/fish transformation. He realizes just how much she truly means to him. The movie ends with Samir fash purchase.
